WHEREAS, The University of Illinois at Chicago (UIC) considers itself “one of the most ethnically and culturally diverse campuses in the country”, and; [7]

WHEREAS, UIC claims that every student has “the chance to study, work and grow with classmates who will broaden [their] perspectives and worldview”, and; [7]

WHEREAS, UIC, has been committed to the principle of equality of opportunity, and states in its Urban Mission that it is “focused on eliminating disparities in health, education and economic opportunity” to “improve the quality of life in metropolitan areas around the world”, and; [7]

WHEREAS, an estimated 70 million American, or one out of three, have been arrested or convicted, and;

WHEREAS, about 42% of adults in Illinois have a criminal record, and;

WHEREAS, there are many socioeconomic factors that increase the likelihood of involvement with the criminal legal system, such as being poor, coming from neighborhoods with low educational spending and high incarceration rates, having no access to social mobility or economic opportunity, and these factors persist or worsen after a conviction, and;

WHEREAS, many secondary educational institutes having a combination of zero-tolerance policies and a large police presence can mean students are pushed out of the classroom—and much more likely to be introduced into the criminal justice system, and;

WHEREAS, poor people of color are disproportionately arrested, convicted, and incarcerated, and;
WHEREAS, according to the NAACP, in 2015, African Americans and Latinos make up approximately 32% of the US population, but comprise of 56% of all incarcerated people, and; [5]

WHEREAS, according to the NAACP, a criminal record can reduce the likelihood of a callback or job offer by nearly 50 percent, and; [5]

WHEREAS, the social stigma of an arrest or conviction persists throughout life, and;

WHEREAS, according to a study in the Journal of Criminology, many people with conviction records faced restricted educational opportunities, found it hard to convince potential landlords or employers to overlook their record and feared that their criminal record will follow them throughout their lives, and; [4]

WHEREAS, UIC is compounding this problem by considering an applicant’s criminal record in the admission process and creating a barrier to education, and;

WHEREAS, asking applicants about past felonies convictions has a chilling effect, discouraging people from completing the application processes, and;

WHEREAS, a study on the State Universities of New York found a very high attrition rate for application completion for people with felonies compared to people without felonies (62.5% vs 21%), and;

WHEREAS, in two-thirds of the schools participating in the study, the felony application attrition rate was more than 10 times higher than the felony rejection rate, meaning for one applicant denied because of a felony conviction 15 such applicants are denied because of application attrition, and;
WHEREAS, the United States Department of Education has given forceful guidance for colleges and universities to eliminate collateral consequences of conviction and encourages removing this question from applications, and;
WHEREAS, the state of New York chose to remove this question from all the diverse universities and colleges that comprise the State Universities of New York (SUNY), and;

WHEREAS, the state of California university system never asked the question at all, and;

WHEREAS, by encouraging students to earn a college degree, colleges and universities are helping to mitigate the unnecessary and sweeping collateral consequences of having a conviction record, and;

WHEREAS, Illinois residents should be supported in their efforts to lead positive and productive lives, support their families, and contribute to their communities, and;

WHEREAS, UIC, as a public university, continuing to inquire about conviction records, adds to the number of ex-convicts unable to get an education, and;
WHEREAS, UIC, by not standing up to its ideals of equality of education for all, is excluding a group of smart, capable, brilliant people from its student body, and;

WHEREAS, due to these faults, UIC stands in contradiction to its mission of “equality of opportunity”.

LET IT BE RESOLVED, the University of Illinois at Chicago may not inquire about or consider any applicant's conviction history information at any time during the admissions process, and;

LET IT BE FURTHER RESOLVED, UIC must not consider any conviction history information that was provided at any point during the admissions process from any application that uses a third-party-vendor that inquires about an applicant’s criminal history in the admission process or allows applicants to apply for admission at multi-institution applications, and;

LET IT BE FURTHER RESOLVED, when an inquiry or consideration of criminal history in relation to the multi-institution applications is made, such as the Common Application, UIC is required to prominently display a statement on all admissions material and the admissions website that informs applicants that UIC is prohibited from considering an applicant's criminal history and that any applicant using the multi-institution applications will not be penalized for failing to answer the questions about his or her criminal history information, and;

LET IT BE FURTHER RESOLVED, in spite of the above statements, inquiries or considerations of an applicant's criminal history are permitted only if it is required by federal law or in accordance with Section 2605-327 of the Department of State Police Law of Civil Administrative Code of Illinois or Section 10,15 or 20 of the Medical School Matriculant Criminal History Records Check Act, and;

LET IT BE FURTHER RESOLVED, after an individual has been admitted, UIC is allowed to inquire about criminal history only to offer the individual counseling, services, or other guidance, and;

LET IT BE FURTHER RESOLVED, UIC is allowed, but not required, to inquire about criminal history information related to specific convictions to follow existing laws and restrictions on aspects of campus life such as housing and employment, and;

LET IT BE FURTHER RESOLVED, UIC must include information on all printed and online admissions materials that informs prospective applicants that a conviction record may affect an individual's ability to obtain certain professional or occupational licenses, types of employment, or to participate in certain clinical or other educational requirements, and;

LET IT BE FURTHER RESOLVED, UIC must provide a contact for applicants or prospective applicants to ask questions confidentially and seek advice about any restrictions they may face due to a criminal record.

LET IT BE FURTHER RESOLVED, UIC will be a pioneer equal opportunity and justice for all individuals of society, including those who have a conviction record or a 9th grade demerit.
